Apostilles and authentications for the legalisation of documents

Apostilles and authentications for the legalisation of documents

Documents issued by a German government agency – Federal, State or Local – are sometimes recognised abroad only after they have been verified as genuine in an internationally recognised procedure.

In one such procedure, the document is authenticated by affixing a stamp on it. The authenticated document is then legalised at a diplomatic or consular post of the country where it is intended to be used. Some countries require that the document first be 'super-legalised' by the Federal Office of Administration (Bundesverwaltungsamt – BVA) in Cologne.

Another procedure is the Apostille process under the Hague Convention. Apostille certificates are issued for use in countries that are party to the Hague Convention of 5 October 1961. In this procedure, the Apostille is placed on the document. The Convention's web site, www.hcch.net, contains a list of signature countries.

The Government Office for the Münster Region authenticates/apostilles public documents issued in its jurisdiction and intended for use abroad.

Process

Please send us your documents along with a written request. No specific format is required for this. Always state the country where the document will be used, and remember to give your address. In most cases, the processing turnaround time for documents in written procedure is between 7 and 14 days. It is better to put in your request early, given that the endorsement procedure may take a little longer. You can download the order form our website, www.brms.nrw.de/go/apostillen.

What if a document needs to be super-legalised?

Documents that require final authentication by the Federal Office of Administration (BVA) should be sent to us, along with an extra application directed to the "Bundesverwaltungsamt". Following pre-authentication here at the Government Office, the documents will then be forwarded to Cologne for further legalisation. The requisite order form can also be obtained from our website.
